

DUFATANYE REFRESHER TRAINING OF TRAINERS PRE/POST ANALYSIS REPORT

Rubavu
Western District
Rwanda

20 - 21 AUGUST
2025

Musanze Northern District
Rwanda

INTRODUCTION

Two, one-day Refresher Training of Trainers (ToT) were held in Rubavu and Musanze on the 20 and 21 of August 2025 respectively as part of the Dufatanye Programme.

The programme, implemented through sport-for-peace and capacity building activities among Rwandan women, has the goal of enhancing their participation in peacebuilding, leadership, and gender equality initiatives.

This study employed a quantitative pre- and post-assessment survey design to evaluate changes in participants' awareness, understanding, and attitudes toward the Women, Peace, and Security (WPS) agenda, particularly the UN Security Council Resolution 1325 (UNSCR 1325).

36 respondents completed both the pre and post surveys.

INSTRUMENT

The assessment sought to measure:

1. The level of knowledge on UNSCR 1325, its pillars, and focus areas.
2. The level of understanding of conflict management concepts.
3. Participants' attitudes and practices toward peace negotiations, Gender-based Violence (GBV) prevention and reporting, and community activism.

A structured questionnaire was designed and administered both before (pre-test) and after (post-test) the training. The instrument comprised 18 questions divided into three main sections:

- Section A: Knowledge and Understanding – assessed participants' comprehension of UNSCR 1325, conflict transformation, GBV, and financial literacy.
- Section B: Attitudes and Practices – captured participants' perceptions and behavioral tendencies related to peacebuilding, community engagement, and women's empowerment using Likert-scale items.
- Section C: Open Reflection – provided qualitative insights into participants' expectations and behavioural intentions before and after the training.

Out of the 18 questions, 16 appeared in both pre- and post-surveys to enable comparison of knowledge and attitude shifts, while two open-ended items appeared separately for reflection. The survey instrument comprised a mix of Likert-scale, single-selection, and open-ended questions.

PERCENTAGE CHANGE

Question	Percentage (%) Change
What does UNSCR 1325 focus on?	3.59
UNSCR 1325 applies only to women living in conflict zones.	-10.98
Name two pillars of the women, peace and security Agenda you know.	100%
Which of the following is an example of conflict transformation?	48.82
Good leadership in sport for peace means treating all team members/ community you lead equally or fairly.	0.07
List one-way sport can help promote peace in a community.	25.81
Gender-Based Violence includes.	39.29
Preventing GVB is the responsibility of police only.	15.23
Which of the following is an example of community activism?	0.21
What does "financial literacy" mean?	0.14
List one advocacy method you can use to address women's issues in your community	-2.50

PERCENTAGE CHANGE

Question	Percentage (%) Change
I believe women should be involved in peace negotiations at community level.	8.53
I feel confident to speak in public about issues affecting women and girls in my community.	12.83
I know where to report cases of GVB in my community.	100
In the past six months, I have participated in at least one activity that promotes peace or prevents GBV.	100
I believe sports activities can help reduce community conflicts.	30.47
I feel capable and confident of starting or growing an income-generating business in my community	44.65

FINDINGS

The pre- and post-training comparison shows a general improvement in participants' knowledge, attitudes, and practices related to the Women, Peace, and Security (WPS) agenda.

The most significant gains were recorded in understanding the pillars of UNSCR 1325 (+100%), knowledge of GBV reporting channels (+100%), and participation in peace or GBV prevention activities (+100%), indicating strong learning outcomes from the training.

Moderate improvements were observed in areas such as conflict transformation (+48.8%), gender-based violence awareness (+39.3%), sports for peace (+25.8%), and confidence in economic empowerment (+44.7%). These reflect increased awareness and positive behavioral change.

However, minimal or negative changes were noted in questions related to financial literacy, community activism, and advocacy methods, suggesting these topics may require more emphasis in future sessions. Overall, the training effectively enhanced participants' understanding of UNSCR 1325, GBV prevention, and the role of sports in promoting peace and women's leadership.

WHAT THEY EXPECTED

Participants' responses show that the training was expected to provide both practical and empowerment-oriented learning. The most common themes included:

- Economic empowerment and financial literacy: Many hoped to learn how to start small businesses and manage money wisely.
- Conflict resolution and peacebuilding skills: They hoped to learn particularly non-violent ways of resolving community disputes.
- Women's leadership and advocacy: Some had interest in learning how to promote women's rights, take leadership roles, and collaborate with others.
- Awareness of UNSCR 1325 and women's role in peace: others showed curiosity about applying global WPS principles in daily life.
- Personal development and knowledge sharing: some expected to learn and planned to share what they learn within their communities.

WHAT THEY WILL DO DIFFERENTLY

Participants expressed a strong commitment to applying the knowledge and skills gained from the training within their communities. The main themes that emerged include:

- Financial Discipline and Savings: Many participants emphasised starting to save regularly and encouraging others, especially women, to join small financial groups and practice proper money management for family and business development.
- Peacebuilding and Conflict Resolution: Several participants pledged to act as ambassadors for peace, promote non-violent conflict resolution, and raise awareness about UNSCR 1325 and its pillars among community members who did not attend the training.
- Mentorship and Knowledge Sharing: Participants plan to mentor and guide neighbors, youth, and women, sharing the lessons and skills acquired to help others build confidence and improve their lives.
- Advocacy and Empowerment: A number of women intend to educate girls and encourage them to be confident, avoid conflicts, and engage in community development activities.
- Personal and Community Well-being: Some plan to engage in sports and environmental protection, and to apply better planning and decision-making in their daily lives.

THANK YOU